UNDER CONSTRUCTION by Arthur Head of West Bethel, and his logging crew, with chief engineer Ronald Snyder, is this 126 foot bridge over Wild River. Situated approximately one-half mile on the Shelburne side of the Maine-New Hampshire border and two miles from Route 113 and Hastings Opening, the bridge will give loggers access to National Forest timber in the towns of Shelburne and Bean's Purchase, N. H.

The bridge is being constructed by old fashioned methods, including the use of a spud to peel the native hemlock, spruce, and hard pine logs, hand-drilled holes for inserting pegs and the bridge piers are rock cribs built up in the river bed. Crossed planking is being used for the 16-foot wide decking. In addition to the main bridge another 20 foot span is being built to afford passage over a dry stream adjacent to the main river.

This bridge is in the same vicinity as a logging operation carried on in 1938 or 1940 by Roger Wheeler and P. H. Chadbourn. Another bridge, no longer in existence, was located a short distance downstream. A Head Bros. spokesman stated that this new bridge is designed to carry fully loaded pulp and logging trucks and to be serviceable for a number of years as the present contract for cutting on this portion of the Evans Notch District, White Mountain National forest is leased until 1981.

Below is shown the road-bed of the bridge prior to the installation of the plank surface.

Greenwood City —

— Mrs. Collette Morgan, Corres. —

Early in the morning the mist was rolling in a constant stream above the pond, like a chimney disgorging its smoke. Then the sun rose in all its splendor, a beautiful day.

Standing quietly on one foot and looking down the end of his bill, like an expert rifleman was the blue heron. He was out on a frog hunt for his breakfast. All week we have seen and heard them creaking up and down the pond. They fly heavily but with considerable speed as their powers of flight are great.

It would be a good thing if all men would get away from offices and factories as I did today. It was a blue-sky day and the blended colors on the hills resemble a huge Oriental rug. I left the hard artery road to seek the road between the ponds that led leisurely upward among the hills. The valley and lowlands are beautiful but somehow at this time of year the purple, shimmering haze of the fall softens the hilltops and so the higher road is appealing.

Turtle Bridge was as usual and so was the little camp perched on the hill waiting for someone's fall vacation.

Beyond this I turned right, where bushes and trees have repossessed that which man once built for his needs.

From a spot on Lady Slipper Ledge I looked up the pond where pickerel weeds and pond lilies gave shade to fish on the unruffled blue water.

Beyond this and far above "my" falls there's a singing brook under a rather broken down bridge. Tall oaks and maples, dignified beeches and spectacular evergreens stand like timeless cathedrals, their interlocking branches forming etching-like arches throughout the woodland aisles. Moist humus carpeting was spongy-soft; the richness of good soil.

As I stopped awhile here I got in tune with the music of the woodland where the shadows seemed magic. I lingered here, in this lonely spot, so far away, bathing in the mountain air until at last a flock of birds came to break the stillness and I was no longer alone.

Nature is generous with her gifts and every scene offers some delight. Here on this rustic bridge I stood free and tall and watched the water stray through its delicate soft bed of ferns on and on until at the turn of the cliff it would become pure silver as a waterfall.

The trail led on through sunlight and dappled shade to a more rugged ridge but I didn't follow. Retracing my path past rocky knolls I heard the chanting crickets. In the distance a red squirrel chattered.

A cloud-puff sailed in the blue while the mountains held millions of leaves woven into exquisite tapestry.

I always look for the witch hazel bush; their flowers a tangle of little ribbons but I seldom find one.

Autumn berries were everywhere: haneberry, pokeberry, woodbine and wintergreen. The trailing partridge berries, some years, are found to be plentiful, creeping in the woodland beside the pine and Christmas fern, their berries like glossy little beads.

After leaving all this and coming along the main road toward home, I really got a thrill, when I saw a partridge. It wasn't the partridge so much for I have seen them often but it was where I saw him. Next to the road there was a clump of bushes, in back, an old cherry tree with one branch curved against another tree making a perfect circle. Perched within the circle was the partridge. Framed! For a moment I watched and he watched me. He must have known how kindly he looked. Then with a boom he was gone to strut in the apple orchard.

Along the road side I found the milkwort, a pretty little plant which abounds in sandy places. Its bright flower-heads gleam vividly through the grasses, and from their form and color might almost be mistaken for pink clover.

Near home my "chippy" met me on the driveway and followed to the steps for his hand-out of seeds.

"I reached my home, humming some words,
Close in my heart were songs of birds.
What a happy visit, full of cheer
With woodland friends that the heart holds dear."

Real big wings came from the sky one afternoon this week. I sat sewing and heard a plane go over flying low. Then there came a banging and splashing. My first thought was that the plane had crashed. In a few moments I located it resting quietly on the pond. I hurried to get my camera and got a picture. Big excitement for a plane to land here. It continued up to the dam looking the "city" over from the water then came back and took off.

There are several danger spots in this section of highway and the survey will be made to determine which sections will have priority for a proposed reconstruction project. It is anticipated that $300,000 in State and Federal funds will be available. Sections under consideration are Wight Brook Bridge, and a section starting near the residence of Roy Bennett and extending southerly past Merit's Turn, so called, with the latter section given priority at this time. If funds were available this section could be extended toward the former Poplar Tavern. It is expected that the survey will be started in October or November of this year, with the construction to be done at a later date. Property owners along the route will be contacted prior to the survey.

SCHOOL BUSES INSPECTED BY STATE POLICE — Friday was inspection day for S.A.D. 44 school buses and of a possible 987 defects, only four minor ones were found. Nineteen district buses, and the Albany and Gilead buses were

Most important of all, "l'affaire Colista" has demonstrated that concerned citizens of Bethel can react vigorously and decisively when they become angry enough.

The last time I saw this kind of excitement in the Citizen was when residents of Bryant Pond and Bethel were attacking or defending books on the reading list at Telstar? Neither that fracas nor this one is of earthshaking importance, but both show conclusively that the spirit of protest, the impulse to fight injustice, the desire to "stand up and be counted" can still be found in Oxford County.

The year of our Bicentennial is an appropriate moment for us to be reminded of this fact.

So may I say "Thank You" to the person who wrote the nasty letter. You woke people up, and goodness knows we need your kind of irritant on occasion. I hope, though, that the next such letter will choose a more significant target. How about the new Horizon Subcommittee of the Bethel Bicentennial Committee? If someone would only attack their dastardly attempt to provide decent recreation facilities for the young people of Bethel, maybe the subsequent controversy would generate enough excitement and energy to actually build a couple of tennis courts.

I can hope anyway.

Sincerely yours,
Ned Hastings

30 Seconds WITH THE NAZARENE
Rev. Barbara Huse, Pastor
Bethel Church of the Nazarene

Words are so inadequate sometimes to express our thoughts. Just think of all the words we use every day. Some of the words we hear these days are far from being very beautiful. They feel that in order to express themselves it must be punctuated with profanity and vulgarity. We surely do live in a permissive society—but is this the real freedom? We are forever hearing about individual's rights, whose rights are they talking about? Some of these things are being forced upon us and they are sickening. They come from sick hearts and minds. No sermons please, O. K! You know what I mean. We use a lot of words sometimes and say absolutely nothing. Here is another common topic today, meditation. All kinds of methods being used.

Correction: An item in our last issue should have read Dale Thurston is a patient at Maine Medical Center, not Dale Stevens.

GOULD SNAPS FRYEBURG'S SOCCER WIN SKEIN — TIE 1-1
Host Gould Academy's defense did a yeoman's job Saturday, forcing a 1-1 soccer tie with Fryeburg Academy, which had won 16 straight games.

Outshot 39-6 on goal, the Huskies protected goalie Dave Berry like a blanket. Ken Rickaby was the Fryeburg goalie.

Gould struck first on one of those six shots at 11:58 of the first 35-minute half. Doug Little booted it, a penalty shot.

Naturally, the "home town paper" means a lot to us living so far away, but the Greenwood column is something extra special. It is a very real visit to a part of the world we both love and call "home". It is like a regular letter from home and a few minutes spent where we would rather be.

The Kooks Are Still With Us!
Two attempts on the life of President Ford within a period of 17 days have brought home the fact to the American people that the deluded self-righteousness of those with "a cause" is still with us.

As the murder of President Kennedy in 1963, of Dr. King and Senator Kennedy in 1968, did not destroy what they believed in, political assassination in 1975 would not change conditions and alleviate social unfairness, real or imagined, that permeates the ideology of one-track thinkers.

Often those with "a cause" get so caught up with their own infallibility that they lose sight of what they believe in, what they want to change, that they can only see what they believe to be the cause of the problem, not what can be done to achieve a solution. They are so wrapped up in hate for the symbol of their frustration that nothing will satisfy them but its total elimination.

To use perhaps an ill-advised analogy, such behavior might be equated to the habit of changing the manager or coach of sports teams when a losing record is evident. Maybe the fault isn't with the coach, but instead lies with the participants. Possibly the baseball nine needed some "strengthen up the middle" or a good left-handed pitcher; maybe the basketball team needed a couple of good backcourt men, more hustle and less "showboat"; or the football squad a couple of good pulling guards and a sticky-fingered wide receiver.

According to Disraeli, "It is easier to be critical than correct"; and someone else said "Only those with a heart to help have the right to criticize." Perhaps a good idea would be to keep silent if we don't want to help.

The alternative is, like the pair of society drop-outs in California, to "lilt at windmills" instead of giants, at symbols instead of problems—a smoke screen for their own inadequacies.

Please count this as two more votes in favor of Mrs. Morgan's writing style. We hope it never changes.

Naturally, the "home town paper" means a lot to us living so far away, but the Greenwood column is something extra special. It is a very real visit to a part of the world we both love and call "home". It is like a regular letter from home and a few minutes spent where we would rather be.

Did anyone ever say "Name withheld" had to read the whole paper???

REVIVAL SERVICES AT BETHEL NAZARENE CHURCH OCT. 1 - OCT. 5

On Wednesday, Oct. 1, Revival Services will begin at the Bethel Nazarene Church and will last through Sunday, Oct. 5. The services will be conducted by Rev. Clayton Haley who has pastored Nazarene churches in Maine for 11 years including churches in Norway and Rumford. There will be special music, chalk drawings and preaching, and classes in human relations. Everyone is welcome to come to all services which start at 7 p. m. each evening. Coffee and fellowship will follow some of the services, with time to get acquainted.

Revival services are often thought of as purely evangelical services for the uncommitted and, although this is an extremely important part of revival, committed Christians also need revival. These meetings are just what the name "revival" implies. They serve to refresh and revive the Christian as he once again renews and reviews his commitment and his fellowship with his Lord, Jesus Christ. Regardless of his church denomination, meetings such as these can be a rewarding and joyful experience and we hope to see you there.

To liberate the mind and bring peace, sensitivity training, self expression, do what you wish. You know these are all false alarms. No way are they ever going to make you a better person! All this leads up to the Bible verse Psalms 19:14. "Let the words of my youth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer." Yes — the Bible does speak—so listen!

The Kooks Are Still With Us!
Two attempts on the life of President Ford within a period of 17 days have brought home the fact to the American people that the deluded self-righteousness of those with "a cause" is still with us.

As the murder of President Kennedy in 1963, of Dr. King and Senator Kennedy in 1968, did not destroy what they believed in, political assassination in 1975 would not change conditions and alleviate social unfairness, real or imagined, that permeates the ideology of one-track thinkers.

Often those with "a cause" get so caught up with their own infallibility that they lose sight of what they believe in, what they want to change, that they can only see what they believe to be the cause of the problem, not what can be done to achieve a solution. They are so wrapped up in hate for the symbol of their frustration that nothing will satisfy them but its total elimination.

To use perhaps an ill-advised analogy, such behavior might be equated to the habit of changing the manager or coach of sports teams when a losing record is evident. Maybe the fault isn't with the coach, but instead lies with the participants. Possibly the baseball nine needed some "strengthen up the middle" or a good left-handed pitcher; maybe the basketball team needed a couple of good backcourt men, more hustle and less "showboat"; or the football squad a couple of good pulling guards and a sticky-fingered wide receiver.

According to Disraeli, "It is easier to be critical than correct"; and someone else said "Only those with a heart to help have the right to criticize." Perhaps a good idea would be to keep silent if we don't want to help.

The alternative is, like the pair of society drop-outs in California, to "lilt at windmills" instead of giants, at symbols instead of problems—a smoke screen for their own inadequacies.

Most important of all, "l'affaire Colista" has demonstrated that concerned citizens of Bethel can react vigorously and decisively when they become angry enough.

The last time I saw this kind of excitement in the Citizen was when residents of Bryant Pond and Bethel were attacking or defending books on the reading list at Telstar? Neither that fracas nor this one is of earthshaking importance, but both show conclusively that the spirit of protest, the impulse to fight injustice, the desire to "stand up and be counted" can still be found in Oxford County.

The year of our Bicentennial is an appropriate moment for us to be reminded of this fact.

So may I say "Thank You" to the person who wrote the nasty letter. You woke people up, and goodness knows we need your kind of irritant on occasion. I hope, though, that the next such letter will choose a more significant target. How about the new Horizon Subcommittee of the Bethel Bicentennial Committee? If someone would only attack their dastardly attempt to provide decent recreation facilities for the young people of Bethel, maybe the subsequent controversy would generate enough excitement and energy to actually build a couple of tennis courts.

I can hope anyway.

Sincerely yours,
Ned Hastings

VEDELLA - HATHAWAY

Miss Linda Hathaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elden R. Hathaway of Bryant Pond, was united in marriage with Joseph T. Vedella, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Vedella, Sr., of Colts Neck, N. J., on Aug. 23, 1975. Rev. Coyle of West Paris performed the double ring ceremony which took place in Sterling Mills' field at Bryant Pond, before an arbor decorated with white glads.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess style gown of off-white crinkled muslin with leg-of-mutton sleeves and a white picture hat. She carried a cascade of white poms.

The matching gowns of the bride and her two attendants, Miss Jane Bartholomew, maid of honor, in mint green, and Miss Susan Hathaway, bridesmaid, in peach, were made by the bride's mother.

The flower girl was Miss Brenda Hathaway, niece of the bride, in wedgewood blue.

Best man was Steve Well of Colts Neck and ushering duties were performed by Donald Voss, also of Colts Neck.

Music for the ceremony and reception was provided by the bride's brother, Michael Hathaway and his group "Sugar and Spice." Mr. Hathaway wrote and performed an original ballad for the bridal couple. A reception was held at the Legion Hall in Locke Mills, following the ceremony.

Miss Cheryl Bennett circulated the guest book and Mrs. Michael Hathaway served the wedding cake.

Following a wedding trip to

Mrs. Joseph T. Vedella, Jr.

Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Vedella are residing in Bethel.

The bride graduated from Telstar Regional High School, Bethel, and the University of Maine, Portland-Gorham. She is an elementary music teacher for M. S. A. D. 44. Mr. Vedella completed his schooling in New Jersey, and is employed at Brooks Bros., Bethel.

(contributed) BUTTONS, BUTTONS, WHO SPOILED THE BUTTONS?

A Fairy Tale for Grown-ups

Once upon a time in a country whose geographical location is of little significance, there lived a group of people much like people everywhere. There was the usual diversity in type of home, occupation, life style and the like; however, there was one leisure-time activity which most of them enjoyed. In odd moments here and there they indulged in a pastime which resulted in an extremely valuable product from which buttons are made.

In time it dawned upon these people that buttons, really good buttons, are a commodity highly essential to the development of all civilizations, past, present, and future. Wanting to contribute their share to the progress of civilization, to say nothing of getting a fair return on their original outlay of time and effort, the good folk decided to pool resources and build a button factory.

There ensued a series of meetings with seemingly endless discussions, as to where, when, how, size, shape, etc. this factory was to be. Eventually, five or six small subsidiary factories in various neighborhoods were decided upon. The raw materials would be handled here and fashioned into rough buttons which would then be sent to a big central factory for additional shaping, coloring, polishing and what not prior to export.

With their usual sagacity, these people realized they must have a group of learned, good and true citizens to direct the operation of the enterprise; in other words, to this group would go the ultimate responsibility for the success or failure of the venture. Theirs was the task of hiring and firing of all personnel, from over-all supervisor to area foremen to skilled technicians to factory rejects. To themselves, the rank and file citizenry reserved the privileges of producing the necessary raw materials and investing stated sums of money on a yearly basis, from which they hoped eventually to profit.

For a time, all progressed about as expected, with folks patting themselves and each other on the back and proudly pointing to their factories, especially the big, innovative, ultra-modern, ultra-expensive finishing plant.

Came the day when the first problems began to appear. Nobody was much concerned; it was to be expected. But then the problems began to proliferate at a truly alarming rate from factory to factory until the good folk realized that the entire venture was in jeopardy and that relatively few buttons of marketable quality were being produced. What to do? Where to turn? Whom to blame? For a partial answer to the latter question, let us now turn to the central factory and examine its structure and management.

In its infinite wisdom (and to save money) the group of advisors saw fit to place the over-all supervisor's office in this main plant where he would have easy access to what was going on and could see as much or as little as he deemed necessary. The day-to-day operating procedures were delegated to a foreman and one assistant foreman whose duties were to establish and oversee the processes by which the finished product was obtained, and to keep a sharp eye on the technicians who did the actual work.

After a bright promising beginning, things began to go wrong; little things at first, but eventually an avalanche. There were several changes in supervisory personnel during the venture's initial stages. Finally a group arrived who decided to settle in and really straighten things out. (It must not be forgotten that there were almost no deletions among the technicians, and, of course, the rough buttons continued to pour in.)

A period of years passed, years of increasingly pressing problems, pondering pundits, and a perplexed population.

The buttons were lost, hiding, strayed, neglected, or found in the most unlikely places at the most unlikely times. They were lacking that certain buffing and polishing that characterizes a truly fine button. The people who had provided the raw material and had dutifully underwritten the venture year after year were being cheated of their profits. The personnel below managerial level were screaming for firm policies and strictly enforced guidelines. Trained technicians left in droves.

People began to appear at public meetings and ask searching questions, which the supervisor skillfully parried with a wealth of information, facts and figures which left them gasping with admiration and considerable confusion, but failed to provide answers. Within the factory system itself questions of a like nature, offers of assistance, suggestions for change or improvement or criticisms of existing procedures were met with harrassing or intimidating tactics, which effectively subdued the timid and silenced the vulnerable.

An exercise in futility occurred when the advisors set up a meeting with the technicians to try to pinpoint the difficulties. Management very efficiently nullified the whole gambit by insisting upon being present. What technician dared to really speak his mind under those circumstances? One can only ask if the advisors were aware of this, or were they intimidated too?

Then a new group of elements appeared among the buttons which would, unless eliminated, destroy the value of many of them. Technicians were aware of it but its use was out of their hands; they had the authority to report it but nothing more. At first, management said that only negligible amounts were in use; later, they reported that they were so hemmed in by rules and regulations that they were powerless. The group of advisors apparently bought this line of reasoning and sat tight, doing nothing.

It finally became obvious that the citizenry wanted at least the following:

(a.) Some guides set up to keep the buttons on the conveyors.

(b.) The source of the undesirable elements tracked down and eliminated.

(c.) Responsible people put in charge of operations to enforce the foregoing.

There followed tumult and shouting, accusations and counter-accusations, in addition to buckpassing in all its forms. The assistant foreman issued a communique, which would at least start the buttons off in the right direction. The buttons didn't object and the technicians were overjoyed, but they reckoned without the foreman. As soon as he was alerted, he reacted in a predictable manner; he got on the intercom and countermanded the directive. He wasn't about to have those buttons confined in any such fashion. Of course, a major portion of his job seemed to consist of hurting about, thundering instantly recalled directives and tinkering with the machinery in a special department where the buttons loved to shine. The foreman loved it too, and interfered so much that the technicians in charge nearly went crazy trying to prevent his wrecking the entire operation.

What about the buttons? The overwhelming majority loved his interference and gloated over the confusion it caused. They enjoyed the prospect of yet another skirmish between the foreman and his assistant. Bless those little buttons! They'd stand up for management every time. They knew which side their unbridled liberty lay on.

Of course, the poor, deluded little buttons were not to blame. They had been told, and were continuing to be told that they were the brightest buttons — ever-much brighter than any preceding batches. Nobody saw fit to tell them that buttons don't change that fast, that it's a slow evolutionary process requiring centuries for even a minute change to appear. One or two especially bright buttons were cited as evidence that the factory was operating at peak performance. It should have been apparent to all who heard that statement that one button can't justify the operation of an entire factory any more than one robin makes a spring.

The supervisor issued a lengthy paper, three-fourths of which was unnecessary. In it he intimated: that management and control were not related; that control was a

ALBANY HUNT'S CORNER AND VICINITY

— Harlan Bumpus, Correspondent —

Mrs. Ruth Dunham of Bryant Pond was baptized during the church service Sunday morning and also became a member.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert McAllister visited his nephew and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wilder DeCoster, at Canton, Sunday.

Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. Sarah Andrews were all her children: Mrs. Shirley Corbett and son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Corbett and baby son, Matthew; Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Andrews, Lynn and Ray; and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Andrews and Kelley. Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Rugg, Lorrie, Chris, Tina, and Carla, were Saturday evening callers there and Dianna Reed of South Paris was a recent caller.

Rodney White spent Friday and Saturday with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert McAllister.

Mrs. Laura Pinkham was a Sunday dinner guest of her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Stearns. In the afternoon they all visited Mrs. Janice Morrell and family in Lewiston.

Callers of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Bennett and boys were Mrs. Margaret Barton; Mrs. Barbara Inman and daughter, Nita; and granddaughter, Shelly; Mr. and Mrs. LaForest Twitchell of Bryant Pond; Mr. and Mrs. Alan Twitchell of Hudson, N. H.; and Miss Christine Twitchell, sophomore at U. of M. at Gorham.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney McAllister of East Bethel were Saturday supper guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert McAllister.

Howard Lapham and sons, Byron and Timmy, and Dan Reynolds were recent callers at Hugh Stearns'.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bumpus and Beth and Joe Kempton of New Sharon were Sunday dinner and supper guests at Harlan Bumpus'. Other callers have been: the Rey and Mrs. B. F. Wentworth of Mechanic Falls; Hugh Stearns; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scribner of Dixfield; Miss Beth Grover; and Mr. and Mrs. Squeak Buck of East Stoneham.

dead carcass being exhumed one more time; that the local community was backward and unsophisticated; that all the furor which the community was creating was adversely affecting and disturbing management. He further cited policies of control established by advisors but made no mention of enforcement of such policies.

So at this point in time, the bright promising enterprise has turned into a debacle of mammoth proportions. Inspiration fails me and, like Hitchcock, I leave you to devise your own ending. As you do, I beg you to consider the following questions:

1. Are the raw materials defective?

2. Can the buttons be expected to stay on the conveyors without guides?

3. Are the technicians at fault?

4. Isn't management responsible for plant operation?

5. Are the advisors weighing all decisions carefully? (One member of management has often been heard to refer to them as "my" advisors. Figure of speech or Freudian slip?)

6. Isn't there sufficient evidence that the time for drastic changes is NOW?

7. Whose buttons are they, anyway?

Remember too, that while it is possibly true that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," it is definitely true that "the man who pays the fiddler calls the tune."

Adios, and happy endings.

Sunday River

— Mrs. R. M. Fleet, Correspondent —

Miss Debbie Dennis called on us looking for a magazine article which she found later.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Blake stayed with Elden and Edwick Yates while Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Yates were to a woods equipment meeting in Canada most of this week.

Jeffrey Yates is coming along good on his new home, and if all goes well they hope to be living in it before Thanksgiving.

One new thing calls for another. Last week it was two new chimneys. This week we had to re-roof the back of the house. It did not like being tread over as it was old and cracked.

Only five more meetings before our Sunday School should have a Christmas program and party. Hope all can make it.

Mrs. Isobel Rolfe of North Waterford called on her daughter and family the David Fleets Sunday.

CARD OF THANKS
September 22, 1975
I wish to express my deepest appreciation to our many friends in Bethel who expressed their sympathy at the sudden and wholly unexpected death of my wife in Rumford Community Hospital on September 9th. May was a devotee of Bethel for over 25 years. If departed souls have a choice in their niche in Heaven I am certain that May will pick a spot closely resembling her beloved Bethel. I wish also to thank Drs. Ellsmore and Jackson, Mrs. Marion Kimball of Gilead, who drove me to the Hospital three times that day, and of course the Ladds of Mayville who were a tower of strength and comfort in a very trying period.

REBELS SHUT OUT HALL-DALE

FOR FIRST FOOTBALL WIN, 8-0

Telstar Regional High captured its first win of the season Saturday, trimming host Hall-Dale, 8-0 in a Mountain Valley Conference football game.

It was Hall-Dale's first loss of the season following opening wins over Leavitt and Monmouth Academy in the first two weeks of play.

The only score of the game came midway through the first quarter following Telstar's recovery of a Bulldog fumble on the Hall-Dale 25 yard line. Quarterback Duffy Ellsworth needed only one play—a pass completion to Dave Webster all alone in the end zone to put Telstar on the scoreboard.

Another pass to Alan Seames, in the right corner gave the winning Rebels two points.

The touchdown was the first scored against the Hall-Dale defense this season. The Bulldogs shut out their two previous opponents by identical 22-0 scores.

The scoring: Telstar 8 0 0 0-8
T: Webster, 25 reception from Seames, (Pass from Ellsworth).
